Nursing Home and Assisted Living Guide

Seventh Edition

Navigating the long-term care maze:

Practical solutions on how to find, get and pay for good long-term care.

Navigating the difficult and complex world of caring for a loved one can become a full-time job. It becomes even harder when it is apparent that a family member or loved one can no longer care for him or herself. Perhaps the loved one has a progressive disease like Alzheimer's, or the person may have had a stroke or a fall.

Difficult choices have to be made, and often those responsible for making decisions are emotionally and physically drained. We encourage you to stay hopeful and understand that good information is available to help you make the right choices for your family.

Working daily with families who face similar challenges inspired us to design this booklet. This is meant to act as a compass, a guide of sorts, with information and answers to many of the questions you may have.

We hope you find this useful as you determine how to find, get and pay for good long-term care.

Kindly,

Miles Hurley, JD, CELA

Selecting a Nursing Home

When someone is faced with the overwhelming job of finding a nursing home for a loved one, the question often asked is, “Where do I begin?” Although this is a job that no one wants to do, it can be done with confidence that the best decision was made for everyone involved.

Identify what is most important

When placement is necessary, it is crucial that the family and/or potential resident decide what’s most important to them in looking for a facility. The resident’s needs and wants should be included in this evaluation. Things such as location of the facility, necessity of a special care unit, and source of payment have to be considered when beginning this process.

The next step is to identify the facilities in your area that meet the criteria you established above. This guide provides a list of skilled nursing facilities in the metro Atlanta area and surrounding counties.

If placement is “down the road” and you have time, call the nursing facility and request an information packet, activity calendar and a menu.

Beyond this guide, listings of facilities can be obtained from:

- Medicare’s Nursing Home Compare
www.medicare.gov/NursingHomeCompare/
- Georgia Healthcare Facility Regulator
(404) 657-5700
www.GAMap2Care.info
- Georgia Long-Term Care Ombudsman Resource Center
(404) 657-5327
www.georgiaombudsman.org

Prepare to visit the facilities in person

Plan to visit twice, once scheduled and then another time unscheduled.

- For the scheduled visit, contact the Admissions Coordinator at each facility to set up a time to meet with them.
- For the second visit, just show up in the evening or on the weekend to see if there is a drastic difference in the atmosphere of the facility or the care being provided.
- It is important to tour at least two facilities so you can see the difference in the physical plan and the staff.

When you are touring pay attention to your gut feeling. Ask yourself the following questions:

- Did I feel welcome?
- How long did I have to wait to meet with someone?
- Did the staff member find out my family member’s wants and needs?
- Was the facility clean?
- Were there any strong odors?
- Was the staff friendly?
- Did they seem to generally care for the residents?
- Did the staff seem to get along with each other?

Listen and observe. You can learn so much just by watching and paying attention.

Ask any questions that come to mind. There are no “dumb” questions.

Evaluating a Nursing Home

As you visit nursing homes, take the time to download the nursing home evaluations form at www.hurleyclaw.com/resources.

Use a separate form for each place you visit. Don't expect every nursing home to score well on every question. The presence or absence of any of these items does not automatically mean a facility is good or bad; each has its own strengths and weaknesses. Simply consider what is most important to your family member and you. Record your observations for each question by circling a number from one to five and then total up the score.

Your ratings will help you compare nursing homes and choose the best one for your situation. But don't rely simply on the numbers.

- Ask to speak to family members of other residents.
- Medicare offers information for nursing homes participating in Medicare. This is called "Nursing Home Compare" and can be found at medicare.gov. Medicare's Nursing Home Compare includes a five-star rating system for each facility. This rating system is based upon health inspections, staffing and quality measures. The Medicare Nursing Home Compare should be one of the many tools you use when selecting a nursing home. Do not use the Medicare Nursing Home Compare as your only source of information about a facility; always visit the facility in person.

Once a facility has been chosen, there are some definite steps you can take to make the process less stressful on the resident.

- First, plan the move carefully. If you know the resident becomes very difficult to deal with in the late afternoon, plan the admission for mid-morning.
- Next, complete the admission paperwork before your loved one actually moves into the facility. This will allow you to spend the first few hours there getting settled and making him/her feel secure in the new living environment.
- There are some practical things you want to be sure to do, like:
 - Marking every piece of clothing with a permanent laundry marker.
 - If you are going to do your loved one's laundry, post a sign on the closet door to notify staff and provide a laundry bag where dirty clothes can be placed.
 - Also, bring in familiar things for the resident so that there is a feeling of home. However, realize that space is limited especially in a semi-private room.

A very important thing for you to remember is that the staff of the facility is just meeting your loved one for the first time. They do not know his or her likes or dislikes, or those little nuances that make caregiving go smoother.

- The best way you can help your loved one is to tell the staff, in writing, as much information as possible about your loved one (e.g., his/her likes and dislikes, typical daily schedule, pet peeves, and so on).

It is important that you get to know the people who are caring for your loved one.

- Most importantly, stay involved. Let everyone know how much you care and how committed you are to your loved one's care.
- Also understand you will not help your loved one by becoming anxious or overly emotional.

Nursing Home Admission

Generally, individuals are admitted to a nursing home in one of two ways.

1. Needing sub-acute rehab after a stay in a hospital...

The first, and most common way, is by being admitted to a nursing home following a three-night stay in a hospital whereupon the doctor feels that the patient needs sub-acute rehabilitation services in order to maintain or improve functioning. Rehabilitation services can include physical therapy, occupational therapy, speech therapy, wound therapy or skilled nursing care.

Medicare Part A pays for certain rehabilitation services for a short period of time. (See page 11 for more information on Medicare.) Admission to a nursing home is generally arranged by the social worker or discharge planner at the hospital in consultation with the patient and family.

2. Finding a long-term care bed from home or assisted living

The second way that individuals enter a nursing home is from home, assisted or independent living. This means that the individual is seeking a long-term care bed, not a sub-acute rehab bed.

Finding a nursing home that will accept an individual for long-term care (and not for sub-acute rehab) can be difficult. Most nursing homes do not have an abundant supply of long-term care beds, so individuals seeking a bed may be placed on a waiting list. Without having a social worker or discharge planner to help with the admission, most families have to handle the paperwork on their own.

Finding a bed takes time and persistence. Once families have visited nursing homes and have selected their top three to five choices, staying in contact with the Admissions Coordinator is very important. Provide them with the forms and medical records they need and explain your loved one's needs.

Here are the forms that families must provide to a nursing home in order for the facility to consider an individual for admission:

- Physician order for nursing home care (this will be a written order in addition to two state-mandated forms called the Level-1 and the DMA-6). These forms are effective for 30 days from completion.
- a current list of medications;
- a negative TB test or a clear chest x-ray;
- latest medical records
- physical, or clinical notes from a healthcare professional.

Some facilities may require more information as they are trying to determine if they can adequately meet the potential resident's needs.

How to Get Good Care in a Nursing Home

Once your loved one has entered a nursing home, your key role is as an advocate for your loved one's care. The best way to accomplish this is to keep in frequent communication with the nursing home staff.

During the initial assessment process, you can help by making a list of your loved one's needs and giving the list to the staff. For example, you may have noticed signs of depression along with symptoms of Alzheimer's. The staff may not notice these signs since they do not know your loved one, so your input will be invaluable.

Your loved one will have a period of adjustment when entering a nursing home. Not only will they need time to get used to new surroundings, it will take time for the staff to get to know them. Frequent communication with the staff will let you know how they are adjusting.

At some point in time you will have a concern about your loved one's care. Here are some suggestions to help you.

- Familiarize yourself with the complaint process at the facility.
- Identify the problem.
- Keep notes with specific dates, names and incidents.
- Share the problem with appropriate people based on the complaint process.
- Suggest some ideas in solving the problem.
- Request a care plan meeting if the problem is not resolved.
- Contact the Long-term Care Ombudsman.

Care Planning

The care planning process begins with a baseline assessment. This assessment occurs soon after a resident enters the nursing home, certainly within the first two weeks.

A team from the nursing home which may include a doctor, nurse, social worker, dietitian and physical, occupational or recreational therapist uses information from both the resident and the family about the resident's medical and emotional needs to create a comprehensive plan of care.

This baseline assessment then becomes the yardstick against which the caregivers can measure the resident's progress. A care plan meeting will be held on a quarterly basis or when any significant change occurs. You can request a care plan meeting at any time.

The team asks family members about the resident's medical, psychological, spiritual and social needs. You can also contribute information about your loved one's preferences and usual routine. For example, you might tell the staff, "Dad likes to listen to the radio as he falls asleep. He's been doing this since I was a child."

💰 How to pay for the nursing home

One of the things that concerns most people about nursing home care is how to pay for it. There are basically four ways that you can pay for the cost of a nursing home:

- 1. Use Long-Term Care Insurance – If you are fortunate enough to have this type of coverage, it may go toward paying for the cost of the nursing home.
- 2. Pay with your own funds – This is the method many people choose first. Quite simply, it means paying for the cost of a nursing home out of your pocket. Unfortunately, with nursing home bills averaging between $8,000 and $12,000 per month in our area, few people can afford a long-term stay in a nursing home.
- 3. Apply for VA Assistance – This type of benefit may be available to someone over sixty-five years of age or disabled with wartime military service or is a surviving spouse of someone with wartime service. Hurley Elder Care Law attorneys are accredited with the VA to provide more information on VA special pensions.
- 4. Apply for Medicaid – This is a primarily federally funded and state administered program that pays for the cost of the nursing home if certain asset and income requirements are met. Over 80% of nursing home resident receiving long-term care services rely on Medicaid to pay the bill.

Medicaid

What is Medicaid?

Medicaid is a needs-based public benefits program that is primarily funded by the federal government and administered by each state. The Medicaid program will help pay for long-term custodial care in a skilled nursing facility. It is the resident's responsibility to contribute his/her monthly income toward the cost of care and the remaining charges are paid by Medicaid. Custodial care refers to assistance with the activities of daily living (i.e., activities like dressing, bathing, toileting, preparing meals and so on).

Medicare

What About Medicare?

There is a great deal of confusion about Medicare and Medicaid. Medicare is the federally funded health insurance program designed for individuals over age 65 or who receive SSDI. There is a VERY limited long-term care component to Medicare. In general, if you have had a hospital inpatient stay of at least three days, and then you need to go into a skilled nursing facility (often for rehabilitation), then Medicare may pay for a while with a daily deductible.

If you have met these criteria, Medicare will pay the full cost of the nursing home stay for the first 20 days and will continue to pay the cost of the nursing home stay for the next 80 days, but with a deductible each day. In order to qualify for 100 days of coverage, however, the nursing home resident must continue to meet Medicare criteria. It is never possible to predict how long Medicare will cover the "rehabilitation." From our experience it often falls far short of the 100-day maximum. Also be aware that if you have a Medicare Advantage plan or employer-based secondary, your coverage may be even more limited.

Some Common Questions

Don't you have to be extremely poor to get Medicaid?

 As life expectancies and long-term care costs continue to rise, the challenge quickly becomes how to pay for these services. Many people cannot afford to pay $8,000–12,000 per month or more for the cost of a nursing home. Even those who can pay for a while may find their life savings wiped out in a matter of months, rather than years. Fortunately, the Medicaid Program is there to help. In fact, in our lifetime, Medicaid has become the long-term care insurance of the middle class.

Eligibility for nursing home Medicaid is based on both your income and assets, and the income cap for Medicaid eligibility is $2,829 per month (as of 2024.) Monthly income of $3,000 is not enough to pay for the $8,000–12,000 bill at the nursing home, but it looks like a person cannot qualify for nursing home Medicaid if they make over $2,829 per month. In cases like this, where a resident's income is more than the income cap, that resident must use a Qualified Income Trust (QIT) to be qualified for Medicaid. Contact a Certified Elder Law Attorney (CELA) to learn more about the Qualified Income Trust.

What about Assets?

 To qualify for Medicaid, you must meet the asset requirements. To understand how Medicaid works, we first need to review what are known as exempt and non-exempt (or countable) assets.

Exempt Assets

Exempt assets are those that Medicaid will not include in the asset total to determine eligibility. In Georgia, the following are the primary exempt assets:

- Home Place: The applicant's house and all adjoining land and all buildings on the property are excluded from resources if the equity value of the home is $713,000 or less. (No limit if married.)
- Household Goods: Household items including furniture, decorations, art, and appliances are excluded.
- Burial Exclusion: The applicant and his/her spouse can each have up to $10,000 designated for burial expenses. This can consist of a prepaid funeral contract with a funeral home or funds designated for burial in a bank account. The face value of life insurance is applied toward the burial exclusion amount first.
- Burial Space Items: Burial plots for the applicant and immediate family are excluded as well as certain other items at the burial site. There is no dollar limit on the cost or value of the burial space items.
- Life Estate Interests: The applicant's life estate interests are excluded.
- Automobiles: One automobile is excluded regardless of value and whether or not it is in use. Note that junked or recreational vehicles are counted as resources.
- Personal Items: Personal items such as clothing and jewelry are excluded.
- Retirement Funds: Retirement funds such as IRAs and 401(k)s are excludable resources if they are being distributed in periodic payments that include a portion of principal. These payments are counted as income in the month received.
- Non-marketable Assets: Assets are excluded if the applicant is making a bona fide effort to sell the asset. A bona fide effort may be evidenced by an advertisement in the newspaper or a listing with a real estate agent. The property must be listed for no more than its current value, and the applicant must accept an offer if it is at least 2/3 of the current value.

Countable Assets

Basically, all money and property and any item that can be valued and turned into cash is a countable asset unless it is one of those assets listed above as exempt. This includes the following:

- Life Insurance Policies: The cash value of whole life or other life insurance policies is counted as a resource if the burial exclusion maximum has been reached with other assets.
- Investments: Stocks, bonds, mutual funds
- Checking Accounts
- Savings Accounts
- Certificates of Deposit
- Money Market Accounts

While the Medicaid rules themselves are complicated and tricky, for a single person it is safe to say that he or she will qualify for Medicaid so long as the total assets are either exempt and/or are less than $2,000 (the current limit in Georgia).

Q I have added my children's names to our bank account. Do they still count?

- A Yes. The entire amount is counted unless you can prove that some or all of the money was contributed by the other person who is on the account. This rule applies to cash assets such as:
- Savings and checking accounts
 - Credit union share and draft accounts
 - Certificates of deposit
 - U.S. Savings Bonds

Q Can I just give my assets away?

- A Giving may be possible; however, it is critically important that you have the advice of an elder care attorney well versed in Medicaid rules.

The law has severe penalties for people who simply give away their assets to create Medicaid eligibility. There is a look-back period of five years. In Georgia, for example, every $9584 (as of 2023) given away during the look-back period prior to a Medicaid application creates a one-month period of ineligibility.

Though some families do spend virtually all of their savings on nursing home care, Medicaid does not require it. There are a number of strategies that can be used to protect your family's financial security.

Q Will I Lose My Home?

- A Under the Medicaid regulations, the home is an exempt asset (so long as the equity value is less than $713,000). This means its value is not taken into account when calculating eligibility for Medicaid benefits, but the home may be vulnerable to Estate Recovery after the person dies. When Medicaid helps pay for nursing home care, the state must attempt to recoup from the beneficiary's estate whatever amount was paid on the resident's behalf; this is called estate recovery. Since Medicaid rules limit the number and amount of assets a resident can own, the only property of substantial value that a Medicaid recipient is likely to own at death is his or her home. The good news is there are ways that a home can be protected from estate recovery.

Let's take a look at some of the most common.

Transfer the house to another person before applying for Medicaid:

There are circumstances in which a transfer of a house is not subject to the 5-year lookback period for asset transfers. Transfers of the home can be made to a spouse, a child who is either disabled, blind or under 21, or a caretaker child (a child who has lived in the house and provided care for at least two years prior to the applicant's institutionalization).

Sell the House: You can sell the house to another family member—thereby keeping it in the family but away from Medicaid Estate Recovery. Either option requires intense and measured planning in order to protect the maximum amount from Medicaid Estate Recovery and to ensure Medicaid eligibility.

The rules are tricky so prior to implementing an estate recovery strategy it is wise to consult with a Certified Elder Law Attorney.

Q What if my income is over the Medicaid limits?

A If your income is over the Medicaid income limit, a Certified Elder Law Attorney can help you set up a Qualified Income Trust (QIT) which can help you meet the Medicaid income requirement.

Q Will the Nursing Home apply for Medicaid for me and make sure my insurance covers everything?

A Medicare doesn't cover long-term care. Seek advice from a Certified Elder Law Attorney immediately to learn how the Medicaid application and eligibility process works. The nursing home may assist with the paperwork, but it's your responsibility to complete the forms and give them the required information. If the Medicaid application is processed incorrectly or denied, you may be left with the bill.

Medicaid Planning for Individuals

When an individual has income and assets that exceed the Medicaid threshold there are options available to avoid a spend down or a Medicaid denial. A Certified Elder Law Attorney can help you implement a plan that allows an individual to qualify for Georgia Nursing Home Medicaid, and preserving a substantial portion of their assets.

Income and Asset Requirements

Eligibility for nursing home Medicaid is based on both your income and assets. In 2024 the income cap for Medicaid eligibility is $2,829 per month. If your monthly income exceeds $2,829 you can still qualify for Medicaid by utilizing a Qualified Income Trust (QIT), also known as a Miller trust. For a single person to qualify for Medicaid their total assets must be less than $2,000.

CASE STUDY #1: Medicaid Planning for a Single Person

Margaret is a 75-year-old widow living on her own in Canton, Georgia. She suffered a series of strokes and was hospitalized for several weeks. After months of rehabilitation, it became clear that Margaret could no longer live at home. Margaret's doctor recommended long-term care in a Skilled Nursing Facility. After a meeting with the financial counselor at the nursing home, her daughter Susan contacted an elder law attorney to discuss Margaret's situation.

- Income $2,950
- Checking Account $6,000
- Money Market $40,000
- House (no mortgage) $100,000
- Car (Chevrolet Impala, no note)
- Life Insurance $10,000 policy, $17,000 cash value
- IRA $25,000
- Previous Gifts $18,300

Margaret's daughter met with an elder law attorney and was relieved to find out that, in fact, her mother could qualify for Medicaid. The attorney explained that her house, car and IRA are exempt for Medicaid qualification purposes. They also explained that mom would need to establish a Qualified Income Trust because her income of $2,950 per month exceeds Medicaid's income cap of $2,829 (2024 limit). The attorney detailed that the previous gifts would create a three-month penalty period for Medicaid qualification and Margaret's daughter was thrilled to discover that, with proper planning, she could preserve roughly 60% of the $54,000 plus the $18,300 previously gifted.

Medicaid Planning for Married Couples

In Georgia, the at-home or community spouse is allowed to keep all countable assets up to $154,140 (as of 2024). The amount of the countable assets which the at-home spouse gets to keep is called the Community Spouse Resource Allowance (CSRA).

Each state also establishes a monthly income floor for the at-home spouse. This is called the Community Spouse Maintenance Needs Standard (CSMNS). This permits the community spouse to keep a minimum monthly income of up to $3,853.50 (as of 2024).

If the community spouse does not have at least $3,853.50 in income, then he or she is allowed to take the income of the nursing home spouse in an amount large enough to reach the CSMNS (i.e., up to $3,853.50/mo). The nursing home spouse's remaining income goes to the nursing home. This avoids the necessity (hopefully) for the community spouse to dip into savings each month, which would result in gradual impoverishment.

To illustrate, let's assume the community spouse receives $800 per month in Social Security. Let's also assume that her spouse who is a nursing home resident has an income of $3,500 per month from Social Security and his pension.

$3,853.50	CSMNS
- 800.00	community spouse's income
$3,053.50	amount to be diverted to community spouse

In this case, the community spouse will receive $3,053.50 per month from the nursing home spouse's Social Security and pension and the rest of the nursing home spouse's income will then go to pay for the cost of his care. The nursing home spouse does get to keep a monthly personal needs allowance: a whopping $70!

Once again, this does not mean that there are no other planning alternatives that the couple can pursue. Consider the following case studies.

CASE STUDY #2: Medicaid Planning for Married People

Ralph and Alice were high school sweethearts who lived in Smyrna, Georgia their entire adult lives. Two weeks ago Ralph and Alice celebrated their 51st Anniversary. Yesterday Ralph, who has Alzheimer's disease, wandered away from home. Hours later he was found sitting on a street curb, talking incoherently. He was taken to a hospital where he is being treated for dehydration. The family doctor tells Alice she needs to place Ralph in a nursing home. They both grew up during the Depression and have always tried to save something each month. Their assets, totaling $202,000 not including their house, are as follows:

Savings Account	$50,000
CDs	$100,000
Money Market Account	$50,000
Checking Account	$12,000
Residence (no mortgage)	$80,000

Ralph gets Social Security and pension checks totaling $1500 each month; Alice's Social Security check is $450. If Alice and Ralph have to pay the private pay rate to the nursing home, their entire life savings will be gone in less than two years! What's more, Alice is afraid she won't be able to pay her monthly bills, because a neighbor told her that the nursing home will be entitled to all of Ralph's Social Security and pension checks.

There is good news for Alice. It's possible she will get to keep her income, most if not all of his income and most of their assets and still have the state Medicaid program pay Ralph's nursing home costs. While the process may take a little while, the end result will be worth it.

To apply for Medicaid, she will have to go through the Georgia Department of Family and Children Services (DFCS). If she does things strictly according to the way DFCS tells her, she will only be able to keep her home and $154,140 of their assets plus she will be entitled to a minimum monthly income to pay her expenses.

But the results can actually be much better than the traditional spend-down, which everyone talks about. Alice might be able to turn the spend-down amount of roughly $55,000 into an income stream that will increase her income and meet the Medicaid spend-down amount. In other words, if handled properly, Ralph might be eligible for Medicaid from the first month he goes into the nursing home.

Please note that this will not work in every case. That is why it is important to have a Certified Elder Law Attorney (CELA) guide you through the system and the Medicaid process to find the strategies that will be most beneficial in your situation.

Alice will have to get advice from someone who knows how to navigate the system, but with proper advice she will be able to keep most of what she and Ralph have worked so hard for. This is possible because the law does not intend to impoverish one spouse because the other spouse needs care in a nursing home. This is certainly an example where knowledge of the rules and how to apply them can be used to resolve Ralph and Alice's dilemma. Of course, proper Medicaid planning differs according to the relevant facts and circumstances of each situation.

Why Plan for Medicaid?

As life expectancies and long-term care costs continue to rise, the challenge quickly becomes how to pay for these services. Many people cannot afford to pay $8,000-$12,000 per month or more for the cost of a nursing home. Even those who can pay for a while may find their life savings wiped out in a matter of months, rather than years. The eligibility requirements for Medicaid benefits force you to meet certain financial requirements. These tests place limits on the amount of income and assets that you can have. The reason for Medicaid planning is simple... you plan so that if you need it, you will be eligible to receive Medicaid benefits.

IN CONCLUSION

As you can see, there are a number of strategies that you can use to qualify for Medicaid and still preserve some or all of the estate you have spent a lifetime building. These strategies are legal. They are moral. They are ethical. Please be advised, however, that Medicaid planning requires a great deal of knowledge on the ins and outs of the system. Work with an experienced Certified Elder Law Attorney who knows the rules and can advise you accordingly.

In the previous pages we have talked about how to find the right nursing home, how to get good care there, and how to pay for it without going broke. But where do you actually start looking? Where should you begin your search?

To assist you, we have compiled a list of the nursing homes and assisted living communities in Metro-Atlanta, arranged according to county. The listings contain the name and address of the facility along with the telephone number.

Finally, we have noted whether the facility has specialized services. Once you have determined which facilities to tour, you can then use our evaluation tool found at www.hurleyclaw.com/resources to help you compare them.

These listings were compiled in late 2023 and some information may have changed after verification.

Evaluating an Assisted Living Community

Assisted living communities provide supportive services in a home-like environment in order to meet the needs of residents who are unable to perform, or who need help in performing certain activities of daily living. These communities may provide assistance with meal preparation, household chores, dressing or bathing and managing medications. Most communities provide three meals a day in a dining room. Assisted living communities usually have a wellness coordinator on staff to coordinate resident care and supervise the CNAs, and other caregivers. Caregivers are available 24/7 onsite for the residents.

In order to be accepted into an assisted living community, a staff member from the community will assess the potential resident to make sure they meet the state requirements for assisted living communities. To be a candidate for assisted living, a person must not require continuous medical treatment and must be able to self-preserve in an emergency (or require limited assistance to exit the building in an emergency). The potential resident is required to have a physician statement and a recent negative TB test.

Unlike skilled nursing facilities, which are required to provide 24-hour supervision by a registered or licensed nurse, assisted living communities do not usually have skilled healthcare professionals (e.g., a registered or licensed nurse) on staff 24/7. If skilled nursing is needed on an intermittent basis, a doctor can write an order for home health care so that a registered nurse, physical therapist, etc., can provide those services to the resident at the assisted living community.

Some communities specialize in serving residents with memory loss, and other communities have designated memory care units. These secure, specialized communities offer services and structure specially designed to accommodate those with various dementias. The staff has had specialized training in caring for those with dementia and related diseases. This level of care offers 24-hour supervision, secure units (locked), meals, activities, and care services specific to each resident.

When you visit several assisted living communities, use the checklist found at www.hureyeclaw.com/resources for each community you visit. You will notice that they vary considerably in appearance as well as cost. Some resemble luxury hotels and others appear to be more like private homes. Either environment can deliver exceptional care. Focus on what's important to the resident and you.

Georgia adopted a new level of licensure in 2011 called “Assisted Living Community.” Some assisted living communities may technically still have the old license, which is the Personal Care Home license. A home or small community that has between two and 24 beds must be a Personal Care Home. A home or community with over 24 beds can be a Personal Care Home or an Assisted Living Community. Ask the staff at the home you are visiting if it is a Personal Care Home or an Assisted Living Community. Both types offer personal care services, but an Assisted Living Community must employ Certified Medication Aides (CMAs) that can administer medications. Furthermore, an Assisted Living Community can retain residents who lose the ability to walk or to self-preserve in emergencies.

The next step is to identify the facilities in your area that meet the criteria you established earlier. This guide provides a list of communities in the Metro Atlanta area.

Download the Assisted Living Community Evaluation form at www.hurleyclaw.com/resources. Use a separate form for each place you visit. Your ratings will help you compare communities and choose the best one for your situation. But don't rely simply on the numbers — ask to speak to family members of other residents.

Beyond the guide, listings of facilities in the Metropolitan area can be obtained from:

Seeking Legal Help

Navigating the complex process of growing older often requires specialized expertise. Certified Elder Law Attorneys support aging persons and their family members with legal issues like Medicaid planning, asset protection, wills, trusts, powers of attorney, property disposition and guardianship/conservatorship. Certified Elder Law Attorneys have demonstrated expertise in elder law and special needs, have passed a rigorous examination, maintained continuing education and involvement standards, and have been recognized by their peers and colleagues.

A Family Helping Families

We are a dedicated team of professionals helping seniors and their loved ones since 2006

Aging is inevitable

Statistics show you or a close family member will need long term care. Whether you are proactively planning for your own or your loved one's future, or are currently in a crisis, it can be expensive and complex. Navigating available benefits, legal issues and asset protection is overwhelming and not seeking the assistance of a trusted expert can be costly.

Certified. Compassionate. Competent. Experienced.

With more than 50 years of combined legal experience and close to 20 years as a law firm dedicated to elder law, our Certified Elder Law Attorneys help clients prepare for what lies ahead. Whether you are creating your first estate plan, caring for an aging parent, or concerned about yourself or spouse, you can feel confident working with Georgia's most respected elder law firm.

How will you handle the inevitable financial, legal and complex care issues of aging?

Whether you are planning for the future or the future is now, these decisions can be complex, often faced when we are at our most vulnerable.
